Stay informed this winter when storms threaten

By LISA W. RAMA
NAVSTA Public Affairs Officer

This past Monday was a wake-up call for some of us in the local area as we brushed the snow and sleet off of our cars.

Before any significant accumulation arrives, make sure you know where to go for information regarding weather impact on operations at your place of employment. In the event of significant snow fall, procedures for traffic control, snow removal and parking will go into effect. When possible, the Commanding Officer attempts to make a determination on base operation changes the evening prior to the start of the work day.

If the storm is either worse than anticipated, or impacts operations in an unforeseen manner (power outages/traffic hazards) then the decision will be made no later than 5 a.m. that day.

In Snow Conditions, routine operations may be suspended to ensure that emergency lanes are not blocked by stalled vehicles, to facilitate snow removal and to expedite recovery operations. Make sure you know what is expected of you in the event of base delays. Check with your supervisor now and not the morning of the storm. The following is a reminder of the various methods used to communicate operational changes on the installation:

Don't fool with seasonal flu; Get your vaccination ASAP

By PAMELA CHARRON
NHCNE Infection Prevention Coordinator

With influenza season quickly coming upon us, it is time to review how to protect yourself and your family from influenza and how to prevent spreading the disease.

Influenza is a contagious respiratory illness caused by the influenza virus.

Flu symptoms can be mild, but can also be a serious matter. In a typical year in the United States, more than 200,000 people are hospitalized from flu complications, including 20,000 hospitalizations of children under the age of 5 and 36,000 deaths.

Older adults, very young children, and people with certain health conditions (such as asthma, diabetes, or heart disease) are at higher risk for serious flu complications, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports.

The best way to prevent the flu is to get vaccinated. The vaccine is safe and effective. The Department of Defense Influenza Vaccination Program is part of our national defense strategy to safeguard DoD personnel against the seasonal influenza virus.

The vaccine should be obtained annually because the components of the vaccine change from year to year. Last year, there were two influenza vaccinations, one for seasonal influenza vaccine and one for H1N1 vaccine. This year, because the 2009 H1N1 virus has been recognized as an ongoing threat, the H1N1 vaccine was combined with the seasonal influenza vaccine.

Influenza vaccine is recommended for all persons aged 6 months and older who do not have any contraindications to vaccination. This includes such things as a severe egg allergy or a severe adverse reaction to previous vaccination with the influenza vaccine.

Here at NHCNE, your health and safety are our number one concern. The NHCNE Immunizations Department is available to answer any questions you have about the influenza virus or the influenza vaccine, as well as to provide the vaccination.

For up-to-date information on vaccine availability call the Call Center at 1-888-628-9633 between 6:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Wounded Warrior Care becomes DoN priority

By ZONA LEWIS
Navy Safe Harbor Public Affairs

WASHINGTON (NNS) — In a message released Nov. 2 to all Navy and Marine Corps personnel, Secretary of the Navy (SECNAV) Ray Mabus designated November 2010 as Wounded Warrior Care Month.

"Recognizing and appreciating the sacrifices of wounded, ill and injured service members and their families remains a priority of the Department of the Navy," said Mabus. "Through the Navy Safe Harbor Program, the Marine Corps Wounded Warrior Regiment, and Navy Medicine we take care of our own by serving wounded warrior Sailors and Marines who are in active duty, reserve and veteran status."

These programs offer a variety of non-medical support to seriously wounded, ill and injured service members through a comprehensive approach designed to optimize their recovery, rehabilitation and reintegration.

Non-medical support covers a wide range of areas including pay and personnel issues, invitational travel and non-medical attendant orders, temporary lodging, housing and transportation adaptation, child and youth care, legal and guardianship issues, education and training benefits, commissary and exchange access, respite care and transition assistance.

Warrior Care Month is a way to highlight these various programs and services across the Department of the Navy.

Author traces wartime life of Revolution

By JOHN W. KENNEDY

NWC Museum Director of Outreach

When learning about the Revolutionary War, often we are told about the key battles and the individuals who participated in those events. Some local history might expand upon those major events, as we in Rhode Island know when we annually celebrate the burning of the Gaspee.

Desmarais

But, the Revolutionary War covered the period 1775 until 1783. Surely there were other events which transpired that, when examined, would present a more complete and clearer understanding of that period in our nation's history.

This is the task that Norman Desmarais set for himself as he began his first volume, of a projected six volumes, detailing the geographical history of the American Revolution.

He spoke at the recent Eight Bells Lecture Series at the Naval War College Museum.

Entitled, The Guide to the American Revolutionary War in Canada and New England: Battles, Raids and Skirmishes, the volume details 403 confrontations that took place in the region. It is an exhaustive

In the first two months of a seven-month tour, U.S. Marine Cpl. Chuck Martin, 24, has been in 16 firefights, has done laundry twice, mailed five letters, and received two. He has spent 378 hours on post and 256 hours on patrol. He has crossed 140 miles of thorny bomb-laced farmland and waist-high trenches of water on foot.

National Radiologic Technology Week, Nov. 7 to 13, recognizes the vital roles diagnostic imaging and radiation therapy play in today's health care continuum.

The week-long recognition not only honors imaging professionals — the radiologic technologists — but is also used to educate others inside and outside the field of health care about the diagnostic imaging professions.

The annually recurring time frame has been chosen to coincide with the

Nov. 8, 1895, discovery of x-rays by German physicist Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen.

Following Roentgen's discovery of x-rays, Thomas Edison applied his famous creativity to the field and developed a fluoroscope that became the standard for the employment of x-rays in health care in 1896.

The science and technology used in diagnostic imaging has since grown exponentially.

In 2010, Navy medicine has invested over $800,000 for new diagnostic imaging equipment now in use at Naval Health Clinic New England, including two new digital systems.

Memorial service honors LeMieux, NAPS instructor

A memorial service for retired Navy Capt. Michael A. LeMieux, a former chemistry instructor at the Naval Academy Preparatory School (NAPS), was held Nov. 1 in Beirut Memorial Hall auditorium, Naval Station Newport.

Vince LeMieux of Sugar Land, Texas, brother of the deceased, delivered remarks on behalf of the family. Personal reflections were given by other family members and friends.

LeMieux, 56, of Portsmouth, died Oct. 23. He had fought a long battle with leukemia since being diagnosed in 1998. He was known for his passion for teaching and inspiring young Sailors and midshipmen.

LeMieux

He attended Western State College and received a bachelor's degree in chemistry. While in college, he joined ROTC, and later earned a commission through Officer Candidate School in 1976.

He was commanding officer, destroyer USS O'Brien (DD 795), May 1995-March 1997.

He earned a master's degree in chemical engineering from Pennsylvania State University in 1983. He graduated from the Naval War College with a master's in Strategic Affairs in 1994.

Upon his medical retirement in January 2002, he taught chemistry at NAPS. He earned a reputation at NAPS as an inspiring and well regarded professor and mentor.

30 PCOs, PXOs go down to sea in ships for SOSMRC

By STEVE VANDERWERFF
NETC Public Affairs

More than 30 prospective commanding officers (PCOs) and prospective executive officers (PXOs) attending the Senior Officer Ship Material Readiness Course (SOSMRC) completed the ship ride portion of the course Oct 22.

The afloat training followed the classroom section taught at Naval Education and Training Command's Surface Warfare Officers School Command (SWOSCOLCOM) in Newport.

The class of 36 officers traveled to Norfolk, Va., San Diego, and Mayport, Fla. to get underway for a week on ships corresponding to their ultimate assignment. They rode aboard guided-missile destroyers and frigates, amphibious ships, mine countermeasures ships and coastal patrol craft.

The week provided the future commanding officers time to go to sea in ships similar to the ones they will command in order to hone their readiness assessment skills. While onboard, the engineering and material readiness curriculum taught at SWOS was re-enforced by SOSMRC instructors, by having the students practically apply what they learned in the classroom.

"During ship ride week the students are provided opportunities to see ship spaces and systems whose operations were previously taught during the classroom phase," said Capt. Randy Lovell, deputy director for SOSMRC. "The instructor-led ship ride includes observing routine procedures such as pre-underway checks, equipment startup and operations, maintenance and system testing, material assessments, interaction with the ship's company, and a host of other evolutions and training events.

The particular events will vary from ship to ship since each host ship will be executing different phases of the deployment cycle. Many PCOs will have been away from the fleet for several years prior to returning to take command of their ship. And while they have had previous at sea experience in other roles on board a ship, each PCO needs to prepare to assume their most important role at sea."

SOSMRC is five weeks long, divided into roughly three phases. The first phase is a common core addressing topics applicable to all ship classes. The second is a specialty phase where specific systems and ship operations for the particular ship type are covered.

During the specialty phase guest speakers cover current fleet material readiness issues, along with a two day fleet maintenance process course. The students are instructed on systems and equipment that are identical to the ship type they will command.

The capstone event occurs the last week of class. Ship ride week is coordinated between the east and west coast and, where possible, all prospective commanding officers are assigned a ship ride on a ship identical to the one they will eventually command. There are occasional exceptions, where a student is assigned to command a ship in class that does not have sufficient numbers, such as either the new Littoral Combat Ship design or an older steam design. In those cases, the student is assigned to a ship as near as possible to make the training as meaningful as possible.

The ship board experience is supervised by SWOS instructors who have previously served as a commanding officer, executive officer or chief engineer.

"The curriculum is approximately 70 percent classroom instruction and thirty percent hands-on training," said Lovell. "During the classroom phase students also have sessions in the engineering plant simulators, along with several static displays used during classroom training.

NWC hosts Norwegian visiting scholar

By DAVID REESE

Naval War College Public Affairs

Dr. Katarzyna Zysk, a senior fellow at the Department of International Security Policy at the Norwegian Institute for Defense Studies, is currently serving as a visiting research scholar at the Naval War College. She is working at the Center for Naval Warfare Studies in the Strategic Research Department.

"This academic exchange means so much because it provides me the opportunity to collaborate on many levels with highly competent colleagues—both academics and practitioners," Zysk said. "This visiting scholar program also gives me access to prestigious academic institutions—such as the Naval War College—and policy decision making centers that allow me to expand my professional interests and advance my perspectives through advanced research, academic projects and professional papers."

She became interested in the NWC in September 2009 when she was invited to speak on arctic security at a conference organized by the college. Zysk was always interested in coming to the United States as a visiting scholar, but initially thought it would be at a civilian university.

"During the conference, I spoke with several professors and mentioned my academic research and writings about the Arctic and the Russian navy," Zysk said. "We thought it would be mutually profitable for me to come on board and share my expertise with the faculty and students. I was excited when I received the official invitation in February."

During her time at NWC, which runs from April to December, Zysk has given lectures and made presentations on topics such as "The Russian Navy Today," "Geopolitics in the Arctic Region" and "The Arctic in the International Security After 9/11." She has also written various research articles and conference papers as well as a book chapter for a member of the faculty.

Zysk is also acting as an adviser to the Chief of Naval Operations' shipping game that is being organized and will be conducted at the NWC in December.

Proficient in Russian, English, Norwegian, Polish and French, Zysk has published a monograph, numerous book chapters, articles in academic journals and in the media on a variety of subjects such as transformations in the Arctic security environment.

NEX offers help with tuition cost

The Navy Exchange wants to help its customers pay for their children's college education through its A-OK Student Reward Program. Four times per school year, four students will be the recipients of a $5,000, $3,000 $2,000 or $1,000 U.S. savings bond, denominations at maturity. The next drawing will be held at the end of November.

Any eligible full-time student that has a B-grade point average equivalent or better, as determined by their school system, may enter the drawing. Eligible students include dependent children of active duty military members, reservists and military retirees enrolled in first through Grade 12.

Dependent children without an individual military dependent identification card must be accompanied by their sponsor to submit their entry. Each student may enter only once each grading period and must re-enter with each qualifying report card.

To enter the drawing, stop by the NEX with a current report card and have a NEX associate verify the minimum grade average.

Then fill out an entry card and obtain an A-OK ID, which entitles the student to discount coupons for NEX products and services.

Center for Personal and Professional Development Public Affairs

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. – Recent changes to the Navy's Voluntary Education (VOLED) program are designed to first prepare the Sailor for the job and then focus on the pursuit of academic goals.

Another change included the stand up of the Virtual Education Center (VEC) where Sailors can receive counseling and information around the globe. Details on these updates are available in the Navy Administration messages (NAVADMINs) 105/10 released in March 2010 and 245/10, released in July 2010.

"It's important for our Sailors to understand the Navy's focus on Voluntary Education," said Capt. Chuck Hollingsworth, commanding officer, Center for Personal and Professional Development (CPPD). "Our goal is not to simply 'enroll more Sailors,' but to enroll Sailors who are postured for success in the pursuit of a degree."

CPPD, part of the Naval Education and Training Command domain, manages the execution of the Navy's VOLED programs.

"We work closely with Sailors to ensure they maximize their education benefits by providing them with education planning and counseling prior to their use of Tuition Assistance (TA)," Hollingsworth said. "This pre-planning and counseling gives Sailors time to acclimate to their work in the Navy, and also allows them time to develop foundational education skills that will help ensure their future academic successes."

According to Hollingsworth, NAVADMIN 105/10 is the most significant VOLED policy change in the past 12 months, and has been met with broad approval, especially within the ranks of senior enlisted leadership. NAVADMIN 105/10 requires new accessions, both officer and enlisted, to serve one year at their first permanent duty station before applying for TA.

It further requires all Sailors to have an education plan on file with Navy College before TA is authorized.

USS McFaul Sailors lend hand in COMREL projects

By BOB KREKORIAN
NAVSTA Public Affairs Staff

Thirty Sailors from the guided missile destroyer USS McFaul (DDG 74) performed about 120 man-hours of volunteer service last week at three community relations (COMREL) projects during the ship's nine-day visit to Naval Station Newport.

McFaul, homeported in Norfolk, Va., concluded her school ship visit for the Surface Warfare Officers School Command (SWOSCOL-COM) when she departed Pier 2 Nov. 8.

During the ship's visit, McFaul crewmembers participated in team building at the Fire Fighter School and Buttercup Damage Control trainer; bridge watch team training in the Conning Officer Virtual Environment (COVE) trainer; training in the DDG engineering simulator, SWOS; and 2nd Class swim qualifications at the Lt. Michael P. Murphy Combat Training Pool.

The COMREL projects provided an opportunity for the McFaul's Junior Sailor Association to build team work skills.

"Our goal is to make better leaders and help each other," said Petty Officer Edward Miller, who serves as the association's president. He said the COMREL projects provided an opportunity for the junior Sailors to work together on a common goal.

"By helping each other, we can help others in need," Miller said. An association goal is to provide mentoring to the junior Sailors, he said.

Thirteen volunteers from the McFaul donated 52 man-hours at Lucy's Hearth, the Newport County Homeless Shelter for Women and their Children, in Middletown, helping to organize a food pantry storage area and clothing donation room. Others cleaned the facility's play yard.

"I volunteer because I get some satisfaction by helping someone in need," said Petty Officer Jessie Roy.

Seventeen volunteers from the McFaul donated 68 man-hours and finished several interior painting projects at two group homes in Middletown, operated by Child and Family Services of Newport County.

Seaman Jonathan Pagan said helping out at the group home was a character builder. "I wish someone would have helped out in our neighborhood," he said.

Another McFaul volunteer said giving back to the community was important. "This is part of helping out the less fortunate," said Petty Officer Dionna Gordon of New Castle, Del. "It reminds you that you shouldn't forget where you came from," she said.

Martin

ripped eight pairs of pants, ruined two pairs of boots, and downed 1,350 half-liter bottles of water. His platoon has killed at least eight militants in battle and nine farm animals in crossfire. The rugged outposts in which he has lived have been shot at 46 times.

"Tiring would be the best word to describe it," Martin of Middletown, R.I., said, summarizing his time so far in the insurgent-plagued southern Afghan district of Marjah. "There's no down time. It's a constant grind."

Cpl. Martin is the son of retired Mess Management Specialist 1st Class Charles Martin, who is a cook at the Ney Hall Gallery, Naval Station Newport. Martin retired in 2003 and his son enlisted in the Marines in 2006.

Cpl. Martin's list, stored on spreadsheet on his laptop, offers a snapshot of American military life in this rural battle zone, where a new generation of young service-members is growing up thousands of miles from home.

Since arriving in mid-July, personnel from the 2nd Battalion, 9th Marines' Echo Company have spread out across 13 small, austere outposts in northern Marjah, a vast patch of fields and ancient hardened mud homes without running water or electricity that one company commander likened to "200 BC."

At one outpost called Inchon, a droning generator provides power for iPods and laptops loaded with movies, and just two lights — one for the Americans, the other for their Afghan counterparts. Service members have knitted together several shaky chairs from the metal fencing of discarded Hesco barriers.

At many bases, Marines sleep outside on cots inside hot-dog shaped mosquito nets. There are no toilets and no showers. Troops bathe with water warmed by the afternoon sun. Fleas are such a problem, many Marines have taken to wearing flea collars made for cats or dogs around their wrists and belts.

"It's definitely a culture shock," Lance Cpl. Benjamin Long, 21, of Trussville, Ala., said of life for incoming Marines. "Some people come here and they think we're living like cavemen."

The two American Marine battalions deployed in Marjah since last summer have lost 21 men so far, according to a Facebook page that tracks casualties.

The dangers of Marjah became apparent shortly after the Marines touched down. On one early patrol, six of them were wounded when guerrillas sprayed machine gunfire down a canal they were moving through.

Lance Cpl. Matthew Gallant, 21, of Cape Cod, was in a convoy that hit two roadside bombs in 24 hours, one of which was the biggest blast his unit has seen.

It is important to note that the condition posted for Naval Station Newport may not be the same for all tenant commands. Personnel must determine from their respective commands if they should follow what is posted for Naval Station Newport. Check beforehand to avoid any confusion the morning of a storm.

Special events

Reception with live music benefits Wounded Warriors

The Ancient Order of Hibernians will host a cocktail reception in support of the Wounded Warrior Project (WWP) tonight from 6 to midnight at 2 Wellington Ave.

The event will feature live music by three bands – the Bad Lieutenants; Charlie Meehan and Scott Krous; and Tim May and Tony Gutierrez— hors d'oeuvres, chance drawings, and a cash bar.

The Wounded Warrior Project is a national non-profit organization whose mission is to honor and empower wounded service-members from the nation's recent and current conflicts. Specific programs include benefits counseling, adaptive sports programs, advocacy at the local and national level, alumni and peer mentoring, and employment counseling putting wounded warriors back to work.

Tickets are $20 per person and are available now at the Hibernian Hall. All proceeds will go to the WWP. For more information about WWP, visit www.woundedwarriorproject.org

Public Works to collect recyclables in housing

Naval Station (NAVSTA) Newport will pick up recyclables at curbside in the family housing areas on Saturday, Nov. 13, to promote the installation's Recycling Program and build awareness about America Recycles Day.

In conjunction with America Recycles Day, Nov. 15, NAVSTA Newport's Recycling yard located across from Building 47 will be open, 8 a.m. to noon to all personnel with base access, tenant commands and activities.

NAVSTA Newport Public Works (NAVFAC) trucks will pick up recyclables on Nov. 13 in the housing areas beginning with Melville, 7 a.m. to 8 a.m.; Greene Lane, 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.; Coddington Cove, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.; Hart Field, 10 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.; Cloyne Court, 10:30 a.m. to 11 a.m.; Farragut Field, 11 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.; and Ft. Adams, 11:30 a.m. to noon.

The recycling program will not accept household trash, electronics, refrigerators, air conditioners, oil, or any items containing freon.

Restoration Advisory Board scheduled at Officers' Club

Anyone interested in environmental issues concerning Naval Station Newport are welcome to attend the next Restoration Advisory Board (RAB) meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 6 p.m. at the Officers' Club.

Members of the public without normal base access must call 841-7561 by 1 p.m. on Nov. 17 if interested in attending.

Individuals without normal base access must contact environmental at the above telephone number prior by the 1 p.m. deadline.

The Restoration Advisory Board is a forum where participants can meet fellow citizens and representatives from the Navy, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management, and help plan studies and restorations of cleanup sites.

The group meets the third Wednesday of every other month.

academic departments: Joint Military Operations, Strategy and Policy, and National Security Decision Making. Their studies were also complemented by an electives program that provided opportunities to explore subjects not included in the core curriculum or to investigate in greater detail specific elements of the core curriculum.

Strategy and Policy Department chair, Professor John Maurer, was chosen by the graduating class of two Marine Corps, seven Army, one Air Force, and 61 Navy students to be commencement speaker.

He encouraged the graduates to stay connected with the college and each other.

"We here at the college can speak with confidence about the future because we have seen that future by working here with you," he said.

The graduates earned Joint Professional Military Education phase I credit, a critical milestone in an officer's professional development, in addition to a Master of Arts degree in National Security and Strategic Studies.

study that views the war on a day-to-day level and puts a more human face on the rebellion as the issues that spark the confrontations were often less than strategic in nature. By the end of the series, he will have expanded the total number of engagements documented to the impressive level of nearly 3,000 confrontations.

Desmarais is a librarian at Providence College and an active reenactor of Revolutionary battles. His experiences have given him a unique understanding of the topic as he has walked the fields of battle and seen how progress has changed the terrain.

The next lecture will be on Nov. 18 with Norman Friedman discussing his latest book, Unmanned Air Systems. Lectures are at noon on the second floor of the NWC Museum.

Rams absorb OT loss, prepare for Army Prep

By GREG KOHLWEISS
NAVSTA Public Affairs Staff

The Naval Academy Prep School's football team prepared for its biggest and last game of the season tomorrow against the Military Academy Prep School after dropping a hard-fought battle against powerhouse Hudson Valley Community College last Friday.

The Rams hosted Hudson in a night game at Nimitz Field, losing 35-28, in overtime. The team's season record is 4-4.

As a team, the Rams rushed for 440 yards. Running back Noah Copeland was co-offensive player of the game with 332 yards rushing on 32 attempts in a failing effort against Hudson Valley. The other co-offensive player of the game was right guard Jake Zuzek with 19 knockdowns and two big blocks.

Defensively, outside linebackers Joshua Tate and Carrington Lewis, and safety Chris Ferguson did some good things in the secondary for the team as well, the coaches said.

"As a team we took it to overtime, but did not get it done," said Coach Mick Yokitis. "We have a big opponent this week we are focused on now. We have 'Little Army-Navy' this weekend in Ft. Monmouth, N.J." The Rams beat the Golden Knights in a rain-soaked showdown last year.
